Brimfield Book of Records, Marriages, Births & Deaths

With joyful news when first the father hears
 A son is born, and wipes off all his tears;
 With pleasure to the nuptial bed he turns
 Where with parental sympathy he burns;
 His heart which in his consort swells with joy
 To think she is the mother of a lovely boy
 Kisses her glowing cheeks who is all love
 And lifts his eyes for blessings from above
 To gaze her pains and soften her repose
 While all is joy and naught but joy he knows.
 Turn on this book, and here and there you'll meet
 How parents' hearts do for their children beat;
 How the poor father but just received his breath,
 Is made a corpse by stunt-handed death;
 How the kind mother, in her dying son,
 Who has but now arriv'd to twenty-one,
 Lifts her kind hand to raise him from the bed
 But while she labors in her hand he's dead.
 Likewise the husband, groaning out his life
 Rolls round his dying eyes upon his tender wife.
 Turn further and you'll see the wife in dust
 While the kind husband doth with sorrow trust.
 All, high and low, upon this book are met
 While they do slumber safe within their dusty bed
 From which they never more shall lift their head
 Till the loud trumpet shall the dead alarm
 And all the sons of men to judgment warn.
